

Q1. When the solicitation states "curation and management", does that include exhibition curation or is it solely collections management?

Answer: This is solely collections management.

Q2. Is there a digital collections management system already being used or will one need to be purchased?

Answer: A digital collections management system will not need to be purchased.

Q3. What is the state of the collection? Has anything been cataloged or numbered yet? Or will the winner of the solicitation need to start from the very beginning?

Answer: Collection is already cataloged, numbered and stored in boxes.

Q4. How often will the winner of the bid be expected to be onsite?

Answer: This Yakama Nation Museum and Cultural Center curation services requirement has historically been sole sourced because the materials in this collection were recovered from a Yakama village site on the Columbia River. The Yakama Nation is uniquely qualified to curate this collection because of their knowledge of cultural requirements and ability to meet curation standards; The collection will be housed on-site at the museum and safe guarded daily to ensure the collection is stable, secure and protected. Contractor will also complete a formal annual inspection of the collection and provide a summary of that inspection as a contract deliverable.

Q5. Will the Tribal government or individual members be involved in the collections management or stewardship of the collections?

Answer: Tribal staff will be involved in the management of the collections.
