1. Agency and contracting activity. Department of Commerce, NOAA Acquisition and Grants Office (AGO), National Marine Fisheries Service, Southwest Fisheries Science Center, Ecosystem Science Division (ESD).

2. Description of supplies or services required to meet agency needs (including the estimated value).

The Ecosystem Science Division (ESD) of NOAA Fisheries uses bottom-mounted moorings equipped with acoustic Doppler current profilers with integrated echosounders (ADCP/Es) to monitor the marine ecosystem around the northern Antarctic Peninsula. These moorings provide critical data for observing the flux of Antarctic krill into and out of critical foraging areas for krill-dependent predators, and for meeting ESD's mandate to provide estimates of krill density to the Commission for the Conservation of Antarctic Marine Living Resources (CCAMLR) for managing the growing krill fishery. Moorings can remain deployed for more than a year at a time, making them a cost-effective mechanism for obtaining important ecosystem data. In November 2025, the ESD plans to deploy 12 ADCP/Es, which will require 24 batteries (two batteries per instrument). We request a firm fixed price contract with a delivery date of July 1, 2025. Estimated cost is
